

Fraud, Abuse & Dispute Handling Policy

Fraud Prevention

Transactions and customer activities may be reviewed to identify suspicious, unauthorized, or fraudulent activity.

Orders may be subject to additional verification when unusual payment activity, repeated transactions, inconsistent customer information, or other risk indicators are detected.

Fraudulent Activity

Fraudulent activity includes unauthorized transactions, false refund claims, misuse of payment information, falsified order information, or attempts to obtain products or services through deceptive methods.

Confirmed fraudulent activity may result in order cancellation, account restrictions, refund rejection, or other appropriate action.

Abuse of Refunds and Returns

Repeated or suspicious refund and return requests may be reviewed to prevent misuse of the refund and return processes.

Requests containing false information, fabricated damage claims, repeated duplicate claims, or other abusive behavior may be rejected.

Dispute Handling

Customers who disagree with an order, payment, refund, return, or other transaction decision may contact customer support to request a review.

The customer should provide the relevant order reference, transaction details, and a clear explanation of the dispute.

The support team reviews available transaction, order, payment, delivery, and communication records before determining the appropriate resolution.

Payment Disputes

Customers should contact support when they identify an incorrect charge, duplicate payment, unauthorized transaction, or other billing discrepancy.

Payment disputes may require verification with the applicable payment provider or financial institution.

Customers should provide transaction details when submitting a payment dispute.

Account Restrictions

Accounts may be temporarily restricted when suspicious or abusive activity requires investigation.

Restrictions may remain in place until the relevant activity has been reviewed and verified.

Confirmed fraudulent or abusive activity may result in permanent account restrictions where applicable.

False Information

Customers must provide accurate information when submitting fraud reports, disputes, refund requests, return requests, or other support claims.

False, misleading, or deliberately incomplete information may result in rejection of the request and additional account review.

Dispute Resolution

Disputes are reviewed based on the available evidence and applicable transaction records.

Customers may be asked to provide additional information to support their claim.

The final resolution may include approval, rejection, refund, replacement, correction, or another appropriate action depending on the circumstances.

Customer Support

Customers can contact customer support to report suspected fraud, unauthorized transactions, abusive activity, payment disputes, or other transaction-related concerns.

Customers should provide the relevant order or transaction reference and a clear description of the issue.

Confidential credentials such as passwords, PINs, and one-time passwords should never be shared with customer support.