

Cancellation Policy

Cancellation Eligibility

Customers may request cancellation of an order when the order has not reached a stage where cancellation is no longer possible.

Cancellation eligibility depends on the current order status, processing stage, product type, and fulfillment status.

Orders that are still pending or being processed may be eligible for cancellation.

Orders that have already been dispatched, delivered, or completed may not be eligible for cancellation.

Customers should submit cancellation requests as soon as they decide that an order is no longer required.

Cancellation Time Limit

Cancellation requests should be submitted before the order is packed, dispatched, or otherwise finalized.

The applicable cancellation period may vary depending on the product, service, or fulfillment process.

A cancellation request submitted after the permitted cancellation stage may not be accepted.

The time at which the cancellation request is received by the support system will be used to determine whether the request was submitted within the applicable period.

Customers should not assume that submitting a cancellation request automatically stops order processing.

Cancellation Request Process

Customers can request cancellation through the available customer support channel or order management system.

The cancellation request should include the order reference number, registered email address, and reason for cancellation when required.

The support team verifies the order status before confirming whether cancellation is possible.

Customers may receive a cancellation confirmation after the request has been reviewed and accepted.

A cancellation request remains pending until the customer receives confirmation that the order has been successfully cancelled.

Cancellation Verification

All cancellation requests are verified against the relevant order records.

The verification process may include checking the order reference, customer information, payment status, product availability, processing status, and dispatch status.

Additional information may be requested when the order cannot be identified or the cancellation request contains incomplete information.

If the order has already reached a non-cancellable stage, the customer will be informed that cancellation is no longer available.

Cancellation Before Processing

Orders that have not yet entered the processing stage may generally be easier to cancel.

Customers should contact support immediately after placing an order if they want to cancel it before processing begins.

If the cancellation request is received before fulfillment activities begin, the order may be cancelled without further processing.

The customer will receive confirmation once the cancellation has been completed.

Cancellation During Processing

Orders that are already being processed may still be eligible for cancellation depending on their current fulfillment stage.

The support team checks whether the order can be stopped before packaging, dispatch, or completion.

If processing cannot be stopped, the cancellation request may be rejected.

Customers will be informed when an order cannot be cancelled because fulfillment has progressed beyond the permitted cancellation stage.

Cancellation After Dispatch

Orders that have already been dispatched may generally not be cancelled through the standard cancellation process.

Customers should contact support if they no longer require a dispatched order.

Depending on the applicable order conditions, the customer may need to follow the available return process after delivery.

Any refund resulting from an eligible cancelled or returned order will be handled according to the applicable Refund Policy.

Cancellation of Delivered Orders

Delivered orders cannot normally be cancelled because the order has already been completed.

Customers who want to return a delivered product must follow the applicable return or refund procedure where available.

A cancellation request submitted after delivery does not automatically create a refund entitlement.

Any refund for a delivered product is subject to the applicable eligibility requirements.

Cancellation Due to Product Unavailability

An order may be cancelled when the selected product becomes unavailable before fulfillment.

The customer may be notified when the product cannot be supplied.

If payment has already been collected for an order cancelled due to product unavailability, any eligible refund will be processed according to the applicable refund terms.

Customers will receive cancellation confirmation when the cancellation has been completed.

Cancellation Due to Payment Issues

An order may be cancelled when the required payment cannot be successfully completed or verified.

Orders with failed, declined, reversed, or incomplete payments may not proceed to fulfillment.

If an amount was deducted despite the order being cancelled or not confirmed, the customer should provide the transaction details to support for verification.

Any applicable refund will be processed after the payment status has been verified.

Cancellation by the Customer

Customers may request cancellation when they no longer require the ordered product or service, provided the order remains within the permitted cancellation stage.

The customer must provide the correct order reference when submitting the cancellation request.

Customers should not place repeated cancellation requests for the same order unless requested by support.

A cancellation request is not considered completed until the customer receives confirmation.

Cancellation by the Seller

The seller may cancel an order when it cannot be fulfilled due to product unavailability, payment verification failure, incorrect order information, operational limitations, or other valid fulfillment issues.

Customers will be notified when an order is cancelled by the seller whenever notification is possible.

If payment was collected before the seller cancelled the order, any eligible refund will be processed according to the applicable refund terms.

Cancellation Confirmation

Customers receive confirmation when a cancellation request has been successfully processed.

The confirmation may include the order reference, cancellation status, cancellation date, and applicable refund information.

Customers should retain the cancellation confirmation for future reference.

If a customer does not receive cancellation confirmation, the customer should contact support before assuming that the order has been cancelled.

Refund After Cancellation

Cancellation and refund are separate processes.

Cancelling an order does not automatically determine the refund amount or guarantee an immediate refund.

When payment has already been collected, the cancelled order is reviewed to determine whether a refund is applicable.

Eligible refunds are processed according to the applicable Refund Policy.

Approved refunds are normally returned to the original payment method used for the order.

The time required for the refund to appear in the customer's account may depend on the payment provider or financial institution.

Partial Cancellation

Customers may request cancellation of specific items from an order when partial cancellation is supported.

Partial cancellation depends on the order status, item availability, and fulfillment stage of the individual items.

Items that have already been dispatched or completed may not be eligible for partial cancellation.

If a partial cancellation is approved, any applicable refund will be calculated based on the cancelled items and applicable charges.

Cancellation of Duplicate Orders

Customers who accidentally place duplicate orders should contact support as soon as possible.

The customer should provide all relevant order reference numbers so that duplicate orders can be identified.

Duplicate orders may be cancelled if they have not reached a non-cancellable fulfillment stage.

If a duplicate order has already been dispatched, the customer may need to follow the applicable return or refund procedure.

Failed Cancellation Requests

A cancellation request may fail when the order has already been dispatched, delivered, completed, or otherwise reached a non-cancellable stage.

Cancellation may also fail when the provided order information is incorrect or the order cannot be verified.

Customers will be informed when a cancellation request cannot be completed.

A failed cancellation request does not automatically result in an order refund.

Cancellation Status Tracking

Customers can contact support or use the available order management system to check the status of a cancellation request.

Cancellation statuses may include cancellation requested, under review, cancellation approved, cancellation rejected, cancelled, or cancellation unavailable.

Customers should use the order reference number when requesting a cancellation status update.

If the cancellation status does not change within the expected processing period, the customer should contact support.

Customer Support for Cancellations

Customers can contact customer support for assistance with cancellation requests, cancellation eligibility, cancellation status, failed cancellations, partial cancellations, and refunds resulting from eligible cancellations.

Customers should provide their registered email address and order reference number when contacting support.

Support agents may request additional information to verify the order and determine whether cancellation is possible.

Customers should submit cancellation requests as early as possible to increase the possibility that the order can be stopped before fulfillment.

All cancellation requests are reviewed according to the conditions and requirements specified in this Cancellation Policy.