

Payment & Billing Policy

Payment Methods

Customers can complete payments using the payment methods available at the time of checkout.

Available payment methods may include credit cards, debit cards, bank transfers, digital payment methods, and other supported payment options.

Payment methods may vary depending on the customer's location, order type, currency, and transaction requirements.

Customers are responsible for providing accurate payment information when completing a transaction.

Payment Authorization

Payments must be successfully authorized or completed before an order can proceed to fulfillment.

The payment provider may verify the transaction before confirming the payment.

An order may remain pending while payment authorization is in progress.

A payment authorization does not always mean that the order has been fully completed. The final payment status is determined after the transaction is successfully processed.

Payment Confirmation

Customers receive payment confirmation after a transaction has been successfully processed.

Payment confirmation may include the transaction reference, order reference, payment amount, payment date, payment status, and applicable billing information.

Customers should retain the payment confirmation for future reference.

If payment has been completed but an order confirmation is not received, the customer should contact support with the available transaction information.

Payment Failure

A payment may fail because of incorrect payment information, insufficient funds, payment provider restrictions, network issues, transaction limits, or other authorization problems.

When a payment fails, the order may not be confirmed or processed.

Customers may retry the payment using the same or another available payment method.

Repeated failed transactions should be reported to the applicable payment provider or customer support when necessary.

Declined Payments

A payment may be declined by the bank, card issuer, payment provider, or financial institution.

The reason for a declined transaction may not always be available to the seller.

Customers should verify their payment information or contact their bank or payment provider when a transaction is declined.

An order will not normally proceed until the required payment has been successfully completed.

Payment Deducted but Order Not Confirmed

If money is deducted from the customer's account but the order is not confirmed, the customer should not immediately submit another payment without checking the transaction status.

The customer should retain the transaction reference, payment date, payment amount, and order information.

The support team may verify the payment status with the payment provider before determining whether the transaction was completed, failed, or reversed.

If the payment was unsuccessful and the amount is automatically reversed, the customer may need to wait for the amount to be reflected back in the original payment account.

Duplicate Payments

Customers should contact support if the same order appears to have been charged more than once.

The customer should provide the order reference and relevant transaction references for verification.

The support team will review the payment records to determine whether multiple successful charges were made.

If a duplicate payment is confirmed, the applicable excess amount may be refunded to the original payment method.

The time required for the duplicate payment refund to appear may depend on the payment provider or financial institution.

Billing Information

Customers must provide accurate billing information when required for payment processing or billing records.

Billing information may include the customer's name, billing address, email address, and other information required for the applicable transaction.

Customers are responsible for reviewing billing information before completing the payment.

Incorrect billing information may cause payment verification or billing issues.

Billing Address

The billing address should match the information required by the selected payment method or financial institution where applicable.

Customers should provide accurate billing details during checkout.

An incorrect billing address may result in payment verification failure or transaction rejection.

Customers should contact support if billing information needs to be corrected after payment.

Billing Amount

The total amount payable is displayed before the customer confirms the transaction.

The billed amount may include the applicable product or service price, taxes, delivery charges, discounts, or other applicable charges.

Customers should review the final amount before completing payment.

If the amount charged differs from the confirmed order amount, the customer should contact support for verification.

Taxes and Additional Charges

Applicable taxes may be included in the final billing amount according to the customer's location and the applicable transaction requirements.

Additional charges, such as delivery or service charges, may apply where specified during checkout.

The applicable charges should be displayed before the customer confirms the order whenever possible.

Customers are responsible for reviewing the final payable amount before completing the transaction.

Discounts and Promotional Payments

Discounts, promotional codes, or other payment offers may be subject to specific eligibility conditions.

Customers must apply valid promotional codes according to the applicable instructions.

A promotional discount may not apply when the required conditions are not met.

The final payable amount displayed at checkout should be reviewed before payment is completed.

If a valid discount is not reflected in the final amount, customers should contact support before completing the transaction where possible.

Currency and Currency Conversion

The payment currency is displayed during the ordering or checkout process.

Customers making payments through international cards or payment providers may be subject to currency conversion by their bank or payment provider.

Exchange rates and conversion charges may be determined by the applicable financial institution or payment provider.

The amount shown by the payment provider may differ from the original order amount because of currency conversion or related charges.

Billing Receipts

Customers may receive a billing receipt or payment confirmation after a successful transaction.

The receipt may contain the order reference, transaction reference, payment date, purchased items or services, applicable charges, taxes, discounts, and total amount.

Customers should retain the receipt for payment verification, billing inquiries, refunds, or other transaction-related requests.

Invoice Requests

Customers may request an invoice when invoicing is available for the applicable purchase.

The customer may be required to provide accurate billing information to generate the invoice.

Invoices may contain the customer information, order reference, transaction details, applicable charges, taxes, and total payable amount.

Customers should contact support if an invoice contains incorrect information.

Payment Security

Payment information is processed through the available payment processing system and applicable payment providers.

Customers should use only the official payment process provided during checkout.

Customers should not share passwords, one-time passwords, security codes, or other confidential authentication information with support agents or other individuals.

Any suspected unauthorized payment activity should be reported to the payment provider and customer support as soon as possible.

Unauthorized Transactions

Customers should contact their bank or payment provider immediately if they identify a transaction that they did not authorize.

The customer should also provide the relevant order or transaction reference to customer support when available.

The transaction may be reviewed to determine whether it is associated with an order.

Additional verification may be required before any billing adjustment or refund is processed.

Payment Reversal

A payment may be reversed when a transaction is unsuccessful, cancelled by the payment provider, or otherwise not completed.

A reversed payment may take additional time to appear in the customer's account.

Customers should check their original payment account before reporting a reversed payment as missing.

If the amount does not return within the expected period, the customer should contact support and provide the transaction details.

Billing Corrections

Customers should report incorrect billing amounts, duplicate charges, incorrect taxes, missing discounts, or other billing discrepancies as soon as possible.

The support team may review the order, payment records, billing information, and transaction details.

If a billing error is confirmed, the appropriate correction will be processed.

Any refund resulting from a confirmed billing error will normally be returned to the original payment method.

Payment Refunds

Eligible payment refunds are processed according to the applicable Refund Policy.

Approved refunds are normally returned to the original payment method used for the transaction.

The refund processing period begins after the refund has been approved and all required verification steps have been completed.

The time required for the refunded amount to appear in the customer's account may vary depending on the payment provider, bank, card issuer, or financial institution.

Refund Amount and Billing Adjustments

The refund amount is determined based on the approved refund request and applicable billing conditions.

Where applicable, the refund may cover the eligible purchase amount after considering discounts, taxes, delivery charges, or other applicable charges.

Partial refunds may be issued when only part of an order or transaction qualifies for a refund.

Customers will receive applicable refund or billing information after the request has been reviewed.

Payment Status Tracking

Customers can check their payment or billing status through the available order management system or by contacting customer support.

Payment statuses may include pending, authorized, successful, failed, declined, reversed, refunded, or partially refunded.

Customers should provide the order reference or transaction reference when requesting payment status information.

A successful payment status indicates that the transaction was completed, while a pending status indicates that payment verification or processing may still be in progress.

Payment Processing Delays

Payment processing may be delayed because of bank processing, payment provider issues, network interruptions, transaction verification, or other financial processing conditions.

Customers should allow reasonable processing time before submitting repeated payment attempts.

If a payment remains pending beyond the expected processing period, the customer should contact support with the transaction details.

Payment delays may also affect order confirmation or fulfillment.

Customer Support for Payment and Billing

Customers can contact customer support for assistance with payment failures, declined payments, duplicate charges, incorrect billing amounts, missing payment confirmations, invoices, payment reversals, refunds, and other payment-related concerns.

Customers should provide the order reference, transaction reference, registered email address, payment date, and relevant payment details when contacting support.

Support agents may request additional information to verify the transaction and investigate the billing issue.

Customers should not share passwords, one-time passwords, card PINs, or other confidential authentication credentials with support.

All payment and billing requests are reviewed according to the conditions and requirements specified in this Payment & Billing Policy.
